Re: 31st Annual BC Elders Gathering
I am writing to report on the gathering. It was a very nice one. The Squamish people really out did themselves. It was one of the better gatherings I've been to. The shows and workshops were outstanding. It was hard to chose where to go to. I didn't want to miss the performances, nor did I want to miss the workshops, so I tried to squeeze in whatever I could. I've always love the Metis music, I wonder if I was one in a previous life. I also enjoyed the Japanese and Hawaiian dancers. The food was great, and the way it was served was so easy for the elders. We actually sat at tables for dinner and were served by many waitresses and waiters, who very handsomely dressed. That eliminated the long lineups. I loved the M.C. he kept the gathering going at all times, very entertaining, never a dull moment.
My hands go up to the Squamish Nation People. Looking forward to Prince Rupert, they had a very good presentation.

Asthma Control Matters

Asthma control: facts and myths

There are many misconceptions about asthma control. Find out whether some popular beliefs about asthma are facts or myths.

Fact or myth? It's normal to visit the emergency department once or twice a year when you have asthma.

This is a myth. Ending up in the emergency department because of your asthma symptoms is not a normal part of having asthma - it's a sign that something is wrong. There are treatments available that can help you manage increased symptoms and worsening asthma. Talk to your doctor about whether you're receiving the best possible treatment for your asthma, and what to do when your asthma seems to be getting worse.

If your symptoms are landing you in the emergency department, you're not alone. In the recent TRAC (The Reality of Asthma Control) study, a large nationwide survey done by leading asthma experts from across Canada, researchers interviewed 893 adults with asthma. They found that half of the asthma sufferers in the study had experienced an asthma exacerbation (which involved either a trip to the emergency department, an unscheduled doctor's visit, or a visit to the hospital) within the last year. Exacerbations were much more common for people with poorly controlled asthma than for those with good asthma control (81% vs. 16%).

Fact or myth? Most people know whether their asthma is under control.

This is a myth. The TRAC study found that 97% of people with asthma believed their asthma was under control (59% said it was "very well controlled" and 38% said it was "somewhat well controlled"). But only 47% of them actually had their asthma under control as measured by the researchers using the latest Canadian guidelines on the management of asthma. This means that most people are not aware of whether their asthma is under control. Talk to your doctor to find out how to tell when your asthma is getting worse, and what treatments are available to help respond to worsening asthma.

Fact or myth? Poorly controlled asthma can cause people to be less active.

This is a fact. In the TRAC study, 56% of people with poorly controlled asthma stopped physical activity, compared to only 13% of people with well-controlled asthma. If your asthma is getting in the way of your active lifestyle, or if you don't know whether your asthma is under control, talk to your doctor. There are treatments available that can help get your asthma under control and also help you manage periods where your asthma gets worse.

When your asthma is out of control

The TRAC (The Reality of Asthma Control) study, a large nationwide survey conducted by leading asthma experts from across Canada, found that 53% of Canadians with asthma do not have their asthma under control.

Why does asthma get out of control?

Asthma symptoms tend to vary over time, and every now and then your asthma symptoms can flare up. During a flare-up, also called an exacerbation, your asthma symptoms get worse, leading to symptoms such as shortness of breath, tightness in the chest, wheezing, and coughing.

Why do asthma flare-ups occur? Doctors believe it's due to the way the disease affects the airways (breathing tubes). People with asthma have narrower-than-average airways because the airways are inflamed and swollen, and may be clogged with mucus. On top of this, their airways can be extra sensitive to certain "triggers," such as cold air or cigarette smoke. When someone with asthma is exposed to a trigger, their airways tighten up even further, which can make it harder to breathe. The airway swelling combined with the triggers can lead to an asthma flare-up.

How do I know whether my asthma is in control?

Is your asthma really under control? Take the asthma control quiz! Ask yourself:

- Do you have asthma symptoms on four or more days of the week?
- Do you wake up during the night with asthma symptoms on one or more night(s) per week?
- Does your asthma stop or hinder you from doing certain physical activities?
- Does your asthma get worse from time to time?
- Does your asthma get worse at certain times of the year (e.g., allergy season, cold weather)?
- Have you recently missed work or school because of your asthma?
- Do you take your "reliever" medication four or more times per week (not including one puff per day before exercise)?
- Is your PEF (peak expiratory flow, a breathing test you can do at home with a device called a peak flow meter) less than 90% of your personal best?
- Have you gone to the emergency room or made an unscheduled doctor's visit because of asthma symptoms in the past year?
- Does your asthma get worse when you get a cold or a respiratory tract infection?

If you answered "yes" or "I don't know" to any of these questions, your asthma may be out of control. There are treatments available that can help get your asthma under control and manage worsening asthma symptoms. Make an appointment to talk to your doctor about ways to improve your asthma control, and what to do when your asthma gets worse.

What can happen to me if I don't get control of my asthma?

When your asthma spins out of control, it can lead to a frightening trip to the emergency department. You may end up spending some time in the hospital after an asthma flare-up. As well, you may miss work or school and lose valuable time from your personal life. Poor asthma control can also increase health care costs.

Controlling your asthma can help you avoid flare-ups and the problems they can cause. In the TRAC study, a large survey conducted by Canadian asthma experts, people with well-controlled asthma were less likely to have flare-ups than those with poorly controlled asthma (16% vs. 81%). Plus, only 5% of people with well-controlled asthma missed school or work, compared to nearly half of all people with poorly controlled asthma. Talk to your doctor about getting your asthma under control, and learning more about treatments that can respond to increased symptoms or worsening asthma control.

Taming your asthma

Is your asthma out of control? Here are a few ways to tame it: Know your enemy

Knowledge is the key to fighting asthma. Be sure you understand how asthma affects your body, which factors seem to trigger your asthma, how to use your asthma medications properly, and what to do if your asthma gets worse.

Find out if your asthma is really under control by taking the asthma control quiz in "When your asthma is out of control." The TRAC (The Reality of Asthma Control) study, a large survey conducted by leading Canadian asthma experts, found that while 97% of people thought their asthma was under control, only 47% actually had well-controlled asthma. So don't be fooled - try the quiz today to see whether your asthma is controlled.

If you have any questions or concerns about your asthma or your treatment options, talk to your doctor (see "Talking to your doctor about asthma control").

Avoid your asthma triggers

A "trigger" is something that causes your asthma to flare up. Each person has their own set of asthma triggers, although people may have certain triggers in common.

Common asthma triggers include:

- air pollution or cigarette smoke
- perfumes or strong smells
- dust mites
- mould
- pollen
- cockroaches
- pets
- exercise
- cold air
- strong emotions
- food additives (such as sulfites)
- viral infections
- some types of medications (such as ASA (aspirin), anti-inflammatory medications, and beta-blockers)
- gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD)

Try to identify your triggers by taking note of things that were happening around the times that your asthma flared up. Once you know your triggers, take steps to avoid them.

Use your medications as directed

Make sure you understand the purpose of each of your asthma medications and how to use them properly. There are three main types of medication: relievers, controllers, and combination medications.

Relievers are used as needed to manage the symptoms of an asthma attack, such as shortness of breath, wheezing, chest tightness, or coughing.

Controllers are used to reduce inflammation and mucus in the airways; this can make the airways less sensitive to triggers and help keep your asthma under control. Controller medications must be used on a regular basis in order to be effective. They should not be used to relieve the symptoms of an asthma attack. In the TRAC study, nearly three out of four people were concerned about using steroid inhalers, a common type of controller medication. Don't let these concerns prevent you from getting the treatment you need - if you have any questions or concerns about your medication, speak to your doctor to learn more about the benefits and risks.

Combination medications are used for people who need more than one asthma medication on a regular basis, and want the convenience of only using one inhaler. Ask your doctor how to use your combination medication properly - for some combination medications, you can adjust the dose to help manage worsening asthma symptoms.

If you're not sure whether your medication is a reliever or a controller, or how to use it, you're not alone. The TRAC study found although between two thirds and three quarters of people were familiar with these terms, only 59% of the examples they provided for reliever medications and 63% of the examples they provided for controller medications were actually correct. So don't be embarrassed to ask your doctor if you're not sure about the purpose of your medication or how to use it properly.

Talk to your doctor about asthma control

Your doctor can help you tell whether your asthma is out of control, make sure you are receiving a treatment that's right for you, and give you instructions on what to do when your asthma gets worse. The TRAC study found that nearly half of all people with asthma did not have a plan for what to do if their asthma got worse. And only half of those with a plan actually used it regularly. Don't be caught off-guard. Talk to your doctor about what to do when your asthma gets worse. For more information, read "Talking to your doctor about asthma control."

How your doctor can help

Your doctor can help you get your asthma under control. Here are a few things your doctor can do for you:

- help you learn more about asthma and how it affects your body
- find out whether your asthma is under control and what you can do about it
- make sure you understand the treatment options available and what they can do for you
- help you choose the treatment that's best for you
- teach you to use your treatment properly
- advise you on what to do if your asthma gets worse

Time to see your doctor?

Could it be time for a doctor's visit? Ask yourself if any of the following statements apply to you.

- I'm not sure if my asthma is under control (take the asthma control quiz in "When your asthma is out of control").
- I'm not exactly sure what each of my asthma medications is for.
- I'm not sure how to use my asthma treatment.
- I have been using my asthma treatment, but it doesn't seem to help.
- I am having side effects from my asthma medications.
- I'm not satisfied with my asthma treatment.
- My asthma seems to be getting worse.
- My asthma is interfering with my life.
- Because of my asthma, I've changed my level of physical activity.
- Within the last year, I've been to the emergency department or ended up in hospital because of my asthma.
- I'm not sure what to do if my asthma gets worse.

If any of these statements apply to you, it's time to make an appointment with your doctor to discuss your asthma control.

Questions to ask your doctor

You'll get more out of your visit to the doctor if you come prepared. Here are a few questions to ask your doctor:

1. Is my asthma under control? If not, what can I do to get better control?
2. Is there anything in my lifestyle that could be making my asthma worse? What can I do to change my lifestyle?
3. Am I using my medications properly? If not, can you show me how?
4. Can my current asthma medication(s) be adjusted to respond to worsening asthma symptoms? If not, do you think I should be switched to one that can?
5. Could I benefit from trying a new asthma treatment?
6. How should I adjust my medication doses when my asthma gets worse?
7. What else should I do when my asthma gets worse?
8. What side effects should I watch out for with my treatment, and what should I do if they occur?
9. Other: _____
10. Other: _____

By asking these questions, you'll be taking a valuable step towards better asthma control. You may also wish to bring a pen and paper to your appointment to keep track of the advice your doctor gives you.

Don't forget! When your asthma symptoms get worse, you need know what to do! Don't wait until your asthma lands you in a hospital emergency room. Talk to you doctor about what to do now, whether it involves learning more about your condition or learning how to adjust your asthma medications to respond to worsening asthma symptoms. Whatever it is, there is something for you to do, so make an appointment and talk to your doctor about it.

Food and You

Avoiding foodborne illness

Many of us prepare and store food on a daily basis - and manage to steer clear of foodborne illness (also known as food poisoning). But are you avoiding trouble by skill or by chance? Brush up on the following tips and rule out some hazards in the kitchen.

Storing goods

Keep pantry items (such as packages of cereal or pasta) in sealed containers on a clean, dry shelf at a temperature of no more than 38°C (100°F). Keep the pantry clean and make sure no food spills or sits on the floor. Maintain your fridge temperature below 4°C (40°F) and your freezer temperature below -18°C (0°F) - this will help avoid spoilage. Place raw meat and fish in a container or generously sized bowl on the bottom shelf of the fridge so that juices cannot spill or drip onto other food. This helps prevent contamination in the fridge. So does regular cleaning of the fridge and freezer.

Storing eggs? Keep them in their original carton and not in the egg tray in the door (which won't keep them cold enough). If you crack an egg by accident, move it to a covered container in the fridge and use it within four days. Otherwise, discard it.

Refrigerate leftovers within two hours of cooking, and store them in shallow containers or sealed freezer bags so that the food cools evenly and quickly. You can safely keep leftovers in the fridge for up to four days.

Working with food

Wash your hands! Always wash your hands before and after handling raw food. Using warm water, make sure to lather your hands with soap for at least 20 seconds. As well, keep counter-tops and sinks clean and disinfect them regularly. Don't forget to sanitize high-traffic areas such as taps or the refrigerator and oven doors. When slicing and dicing, reserve one cutting board for raw meat and fish only - preferably a plastic one, as it can then be cleaned in the dishwasher. Launder dishcloths and kitchen towels often. And don't forget to wash your can opener every time you use it.

Shopping smart

Approach shopping with a strategic plan. With the large size of many supermarkets today, it can often take quite a while to make your way through the aisles. Therefore, select your freezer and refrigerator items last so that they stay as cold (and safe) as possible. Go directly home with your groceries or otherwise use a cooler and ice packs. Once home, remember to put the perishable items away first.

When choosing canned goods, avoid cans that are dented or leaking. Check egg cartons to ensure that all the eggs are clean and intact - never buy eggs that are dirty or cracked - and remember to check the "best before" date.

In general, when looking at "best before" dates, keep in mind that this is the date until which the manufacturer claims that the unopened goods will keep their wholesomeness, taste, and nutritional value provided that the food is stored appropriately. At the same time, given that "best before" dates do not guarantee the safety of the food, use your common sense and discard it if you have any doubts. If the "best before" date has passed, know that the quality of the food may have decreased, and again, use cautious judgment.

Passage of UN Declaration an historic day: Canada's opposition a national disgrace
News Release FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE September 13, 2007

Coast Salish Territory/Vancouver – Today the United Nations General Assembly, after more than 20 years in development, adopted the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples by an overwhelming majority of 143 in favour, 4 opposed and 11 abstentions. Unfortunately Canada was one of four countries to vote against the adoption of the Declaration.

“The First Nations Leadership Council stands together with the indigenous peoples of the world in celebrating this historic achievement”, said Grand Chief Stewart Phillip, President of the Union of BC Indian Chiefs and a member and First Nations Leadership Council.

“However we remain shocked and angered at Canada's refusal to support this important international human rights instrument. It is truly ironic that four first world countries that have become prosperous through the exploitation of the lands and resources of the indigenous peoples, including Canada, chose to oppose the adoption of the declaration” added Grand Chief Phillip. “We challenge Canada to take a step forward on the international stage and reverse its opposition and work with us to implement and uphold the principles contained in the Declaration”.

“The Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples will set the stage for an opportunity for a new beginning, for an improved relationship between indigenous peoples and States in North America and throughout the world”, said Grand Chief Edward John, a member of the First Nations Summit executive and First Nations Leadership Council who is in New York for today's historic vote.

“We stand together and celebrate that the fundamental human rights which we have all worked so hard to uphold in this Declaration are still intact in the final text now adopted by the UN General Assembly. These include the inherent rights related to our traditional lands, territories and natural resources, our self-determination, our unqualified recognition as Peoples, our own cultures, languages and identities, our subsistence, our own concepts of developments, Treaties, and free, prior and informed consent”, added Grand Chief John. “We hope the Declaration will now force Canada to work with Aboriginal people of this country to bring about change to their flawed colonial policies”.

“This document is truly a unifying instrument, a declaration of the struggle that unifies the 370 million indigenous people globally. The Declaration represents a shared struggle and as such will serve to bring us closer together to impact change, push back the destructive forces of globalization and provide us with an opportunity to shape the world instead of only being subject to, or victims of it” said Regional Chief Shawn Atleo of the BC Assembly of First Nations.

The First Nations Leadership Council is comprised of the political executives of the BC Assembly of First Nations, First Nations Summit, and the Union of BC Indian Chiefs.

The Council works together to politically represent the interests of First Nations in British Columbia and develop strategies and actions to bring about significant and substantive changes to government policy that will benefit all First Nations in British Columbia.

JOINT STATEMENT ON THE NEW RELATIONSHIP

In the New Relationship, we committed to a new government-to-government relationship based on respect, recognition and accommodation of aboriginal title and rights and to reconciliation of Aboriginal and Crown titles and jurisdictions. We also agreed to develop new institutions or structures to negotiate government- to-government agreements for shared decision-making about land use planning, management, tenuring and resource revenue and benefit sharing.

Notably, the New Relationship also acknowledges that aboriginal title includes the inherent right for the community to make decisions as to the use of the land and that these inherent rights flow from First Nations' historical and sacred relationship with their territories.

Pursuant to the New Relationship, the First Nations Leadership Council and the Province of British Columbia are undertaking work at a high level to develop frameworks and create tools to assist the Province and BC First Nations to implement the New Relationship. During the development of the framework and tools, the Leadership Council and the Province support the efforts of First Nations, local governments, resource companies and businesses to continue community-level engagement. In fact, these community-level negotiations provide valuable insights and guidance to our broader discussions.

The First Nations Leadership Council and the Province of British Columbia respect First Nations' autonomy and recognize that First Nations are the holders of Aboriginal title and rights. We agreed to a new government-to-government relationship that respects and supports the authority of First Nations to enter into negotiations and agreements to suit the unique circumstances of the community.

The purpose of the New Relationship is to bring about policy changes and set a course forward that will be of benefit to all First Nations and to British Columbia as a whole.

B.C.'s first aboriginal lieutenant-governor hopes he can be a role model to First Nations youth once he moves into Government House.

Judging by the response to Steven Point's appointment, the respected provincial court judge, aboriginal advocate and head of the B.C. Treaty Commission already fills that capacity.

Point was named to the post yesterday by Prime Minister Stephen Harper, replacing outgoing Iona Campagnolo, who had resided at Government House since 2001.

"I remember growing up thinking to myself what I wanted to become and I thought I would have been a success if I'd just been like my dad, who was a logger," Point said in an interview yesterday.

"I did that for seven years and, since then, my awareness and horizons have expanded. And I hope the same thing can happen for other young people in communities where I've come from."

Point has an impressive resum that includes being B.C.'s youngest chief, elected by the Skowkale First Nation at just 23. He graduated with a legal degree from UBC in 1985 and was tribal chairman of the Sto:lo Nation from 1994 to 1999, when he became a judge.

Now 56 and a father of four grown children, Point served on the bench until 2005, when he was named head of the B.C. Treaty Commission. He had planned to return to judge's duties, but a phone call from the Prime Minister's Office a month ago changed all that.

"I didn't know anything about what this job involves, really," Point said. "At first, I didn't want to do it. ... I did think about it for a while and [wife] Gwen and I talked about it, and we thought: 'Well we should do this. It's a good thing to do.'"

Naming Point to replace Campagnolo is certainly seen as a good thing by many in the native community.

Grand Chief Ed John of the First Nations Leadership Council described it as "truly a milestone for First Nations people in B.C., especially in these times of reconciliation, recognition and relationship building."

Hupacasath Chief Judith Sayers, a fellow member of the leadership council and First Nations Summit political executive, said: "It's exciting. It's wonderful. It's huge."

Sayers described Point as eloquent and "a great storyteller." As he entertains heads of state in his new position, she said Point might be able to "open up some views and minds."

"Iona was incredibly supportive of First Nations and I just love her for it," Sayers said, "but Steve is actually going to be First Nations."

As for Point as a role model, Sayers said: "I think he's one of the best. It's a star-studded career that shows people that anything is possible."

Point, who will relocate from his home on the Skowkale First Nation reserve in Sardis, said he has no agenda.

"I hope that what an aboriginal person like myself can bring to this is just a different perspective, a view of a longer history, the perspective of our home aboriginal communities," he said.

Point spoke for about an hour to Campagnolo on the telephone yesterday and she outlined the position to him. "It's so new to me at this point, I really don't have anything in mind planned. Right now, it's a little bit of jubilation, a little bit of confusion, a little bit of butterflies -- all at the same time."

Point shares the belief of Campagnolo that Government House and its occupant should be accessible.

"It's not one of those governing positions where there's all kind of secrecy and state secrets going on," he laughed. "I think it's more of a kind of a position where you can be open and I think it's a good idea."

Point has spent much of his career working on First Nations rights and treaty issues. Although still one of the province's youngest chiefs, he was elected to the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs executive in the mid 1970s.

Sayers described his appointment as an important statement by Ottawa, "a show of willingness on the part of this government" with regard to native relations and the treaty process.

Premier Gordon Campbell, whose second term in office has been marked by a new relationship with First Nations, issued a statement saying Point brings a "wealth of wisdom and experience that will benefit all British Columbians."

NDP Leader Carole James referred to Point as a "wonderful choice" for the job and a man able to walk in both the aboriginal and non-aboriginal worlds.

"I said before that Iona's would be hard shoes to fill," James said. "I think he is the person to fill them."

PEOPLE COME INTO YOUR LIFE FOR A REASON

People come into your life for a reason, a season or a lifetime. When you know which one it is, you will know what to do for that person.

When someone is in your life for a REASON, it is usually to meet a need you have expressed. They have come to assist you through a difficulty, to provide you with guidance and support, to aid you physically, emotionally or spiritually. They may seem like a godsend and they are. They are there for the reason you need them to be.

Then, without any wrongdoing on your part or at an inconvenient time, this person will say or do something to bring the relationship to an end. Sometimes they die. Sometimes they walk away. Sometimes they act up and force you to take a stand. What we must realize is that our need has been met, our desire fulfilled, their work is done. The prayer you sent up has been answered and now it is time to move on.

Some people come into your life for a SEASON, because your turn has come to share, grow or learn. They bring you an experience of peace or make you laugh. They may teach you something you have never done. They usually give you an unbelievable amount of joy. Believe it, it is real. But only for a season.

LIFETIME relationships teach you lifetime lessons, things you must build upon in order to have a solid emotional foundation. Your job is to accept the lesson, love the person and put what you have learned to use in all other relationships and areas of your life. It is said that love is blind but friendship is clairvoyant

Thank you for being a part of my life, whether you were a reason, a season or a lifetime.

First Nations Leadership Council

INFORMATION BULLETIN

Leadership Council

On March 17, 2005, the Regional Chief of the BCAFN, the Task Group of the FNS, and the political executive of the UBCIC signed the Leadership Accord.

The purpose of the Accord is to: affirm mutual respect; formalize a cooperative working relationship to politically represent the interests of BC First Nations and develop strategies and actions to bring about significant and substantive changes to government policy that will benefit all BC First Nations; and focus on a range of issues and initiatives of common interest or concern among BC First Nations, including consultation and accommodation, national processes, and social and economic program and service issues.

Work under the Leadership Accord is guided by the following principles:

- The Parties recognize and respect each other's respective mandate;
- The Parties will be mindful that they each represent a diversity of perspectives on issues relating to Aboriginal title, rights and interests;
- The Parties commit to work to advance the interests of First Nations in political level discussions amongst themselves and with governments;
- The Parties will represent their respective memberships in any discussions that directly involve government and industry.

Through the Accord, the Parties commit to engage in an ongoing process of dialogue through regular leadership meetings to achieve the purposes of this Accord and, where possible, develop common understandings, strategies and/or positions on identified issues of mutual concern or priority. The Parties also agree to establish working groups on identified issues of concern or priority to advance those issues politically.

The relationship established through the Leadership Accord remains strong. Although some successes have been achieved (New Relationship, Transformative Change Accord, New Relationship Trust, others), much remains to be done. The mandate of the FNLC is determined only through the mandates of each of its participating organizations – the BCAFN, FNS, and UBCIC – as established via resolution of their respective memberships.

The FNLC is a political process, not a new organization. Its purpose is to generate political power through cooperation and collaboration between the existing provincial First Nations organizations. Although the FNLC works with governments to develop frameworks for issues such as shared decision-making and consultation and accommodation, these efforts are never to impede government-to-government discussions and negotiations between individual First Nations and governments.

The staff of the three participating FNLC organizations are responsible for following up on resolutions passed at their respective Chiefs' assemblies, and work together on issues where all three organizations have a mandate.

The BCAFN, FNS and UBCIC are committed to maintaining unity on matters of common concern to benefit all BC First Nations, as well as to respecting the autonomy of each organization in achieving progress on issues specific to their respective memberships.

Federal Engagement

On August 21, 2007, the FNLC met with the new Minister of Indian and Northern Affairs, Hon. Chuck Strahl and the Minister of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation Hon.

Michael de Jong. This meeting was hosted in Ktunaxa Nation Territory (Cranbrook).

During the meeting, the FNLC provided an update to the new Minister on ongoing work with his predecessor, the Hon. Jim Prentice, and emphasized the need for continuity in this work. Minister de Jong supported the need for continuity, and for federal engagement through a tripartite New Relationship-type arrangement.

It was agreed that the Parties will work to develop a tripartite document, setting out commitments to improve policy (i.e. Comprehensive Claims Policy, Specific Claims Policy, Inherent Right of Self-Government Policy), process (i.e. negotiations processes), and quality of life (i.e. education, children and families, etc.) issues.

The Parties expect to meet again in October to finalize a tripartite agreement and establish processes to fulfill its commitments.

New Relationship

In the New Relationship, commitments were made to a new government-to-government relationship based on respect, recognition and accommodation of aboriginal title and rights and to reconciliation of Aboriginal and Crown titles and jurisdictions. First Nations and the Province also agreed to establish processes and institutions for shared decision-making about the land and resources and for revenue and benefit sharing. The New Relationship acknowledges that aboriginal title includes the inherent right for the community to make decisions as to the use of the land.

Pursuant to the New Relationship, the FNLC and BC are undertaking work at a high level to develop frameworks and create “tools” to implement the New Relationship. The New Relationship must not be used as an excuse not to engage with First Nations directly and the policy level discussions are not intended to impede upon or displace First Nations negotiations with the Crown. In fact, these community-level government-to-government negotiations provide valuable insights and guidance to broader discussions.

Each First Nation has the right to a government-to-government relationship with the Crown, and the authority to enter into negotiations and agreements to suit the unique circumstances of the community.

A joint FNLC-BC Recognition Working Group is tasked with the main deliverables from the New Relationship document – producing principles & mechanisms for: recognition & Honour of the Crown, consultation/accommodation, shared decision-making, revenue & benefit sharing, and other matters. This group is currently focused on Recognition legislation as the first priority.

Other working groups achieving progress under the New Relationship include the Resolutions Strategy Side Table; Telling Our Stories Committee; Crown Land Allocation Framework Working Group; Aquaculture Working Group; and the Ecosystem Stewardship Planning Working Group.

For three days out of each month, the FNLC meets with provincial officials to set direction, review progress and have high-level discussion on progress under the New Relationship and other matters of common concern. The FNLC will be meeting with the province in the fall to gauge progress under, and identify barriers and obstacles to full implementation of, the New Relationship.

Fisheries

A key item in the BC First Nations Fisheries Action Plan is the establishment of a BC First Nations Fisheries Council. The FNLC was been mandated, through resolution, to hold a province-wide meeting, open to all BC First Nations, to develop the First Nations Fisheries Council concept. This BC First Nations Fisheries Council Forum was held on May 29-30, hosted by Musqueam Nation at the Crown St. Gym. Delegates to the Forum developed a “BC First Nations Fisheries Council Concept Paper”, which was adopted by resolution of the BCAFN and UBCIC in June. The FNLC has recently sent a call for applications to the BC First Nations Fisheries Council and will make appointments to the Council by the end of September. Please contact us if you did not receive the call for submissions.

Housing and Infrastructure

The FNLC is working with federal and provincial governments to develop a high-level Memorandum of Understanding on Housing and Infrastructure. This MoU will commit the Parties to work collaboratively to develop interlinked on- and off-reserve housing and infrastructure strategies.

Economic Development

The FNLC hosted a meeting in July to discuss BC First Nations economic development and human resource development. The meeting was attended by federal and provincial governments, First Nations representatives, and the business community. This group agreed to explore the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding to establish an Economic Development Partners Group – an advisory body on First Nations economic development. A small working group has been struck to develop this MoU and a framework for a province-wide BC First Nations Economic Development Strategy.

Health

The First Nations Health Council is currently developing workplans and budgets pursuant to the Transformative Change Accord: First Nations Health Plan and the Tripartite First Nations Health Plan. Priority areas for this year include: community health plans; governance structure for First Nations health in BC; mental health and addictions (including healing residential school traumas); ehealth; and chronic disease management (including a

First Nations ActNow program). Community engagement is also a key priority, and dialogue sessions will be held throughout the province in the fall.

Early Childhood Development

A group of individuals and organizations with an interest in Early Childhood Development (including the FNLC, First Nations Education Steering Committee, First Nations Schools Association, Aboriginal Human Resource Development Agreements, First Nations Health Council, BC Aboriginal Child Care Society and others) has been meeting to discuss ways to improve coordination and collaboration amongst themselves, to improve the lives of BC First Nations children. The group ("BC First Nations Early Childhood Development Council") has produced a Memorandum of Understanding that was approved at the June BCAFN meeting. The Council has also been mandated to develop a draft BC First Nations Early Childhood Development Action Plan for review and consideration of BC First Nations.

Technology

The First Nations Technology Council, together with the Carrier Sekani Tribal Council, is organizing a Land Referral Workshop in Prince George, September 12-13 to bring together groups currently developing or groups that have developed land referral processes and/or land referral tracking systems. The purpose of the workshop is to share information about these various information management projects. The goal is to work together to share best practices and, where it makes sense, to share software currently being developed so that the remaining First Nations communities who are thinking about developing a referral tracking system will not have to go through the system development process. The long term goal is to build sustainability in the land stewardship information management process. For further information contact Sue Hanley at the First Nations Technology Council (suehanley@fntc.info) or Jaime

Sanchez at Carrier Sekani Tribal Council (jsanchez@cstc.bc.ca).

Culture and Heritage

The existing Heritage Conservation Act and associated management regime does not recognize Aboriginal Title and Rights, nor does it adequately address the needs and interests of First Nations as it relates to their culture and heritage resources. A Culture and Heritage Working Group has been created to work with BC to a) make recommendations with respect to amendments to the Heritage Conservation Act and b) identify culture and heritage site management possibilities within the existing legislative regime.

Energy

On April 2-4, 2007, the FNLC and the Carrier Sekani Tribal Council co-hosted a province-wide First Nations Energy Summit at the Chief Joe Mathias Centre in North Vancouver. During the Summit, First Nations delegates developed a BC First Nations Energy Action Plan to address energy sector issues. This Action Plan was faxed to all BC First Nations, with an invitation for further feedback. All feedback has been incorporated, and a final version of the Action Plan was approved by resolution of the BCAFN and UBCIC in June. An interim Energy Working Group (composed of one FNLC member and one member appointed by each of the BCAFN, FNS and UBCIC) will be created to develop a plan for creating a BC First Nations Energy Council and begin the work of implementing the Action Plan.

Justice

A BC First Nations Justice Forum took place on May 14-16, 2007, at the Coast Plaza Hotel and Suites in Vancouver, BC. These discussions resulted in a draft BC First Nations Justice Action Plan which was subsequently shared with all BC First Nations for their review and comment. The revised Action Plan was endorsed by resolution of the BCAFN and UBCIC in June. A related resolution was passed in support of a key action item in the Action Plan – the formation of a BC

First Nations Justice Council. Work will now begin to identify representatives and resources for the Justice Council.

WHY PARENTS GET GREY HAIR....

A father passing by his son's bedroom was astonished to see the bed nicely made up and everything neat and tidy. Then he saw an envelope propped up prominently on the pillow. It was addressed, 'Dad'. With the worst premonition, he opened the envelope and read the letter with trembling hands:

Dear Dad,

It is with great regret and sorrow that I'm writing you. I had to elope with my new girlfriend because I wanted to avoid a scene with you and Mom. I've been finding real passion with Joan and she is so nice. I knew you would not approve of her because of all her piercing, tattoos, her tight motorcycle clothes and because she is 15 years older than I am ... but it's not only the passion. Dad, she's pregnant.

Joan says that we are going to be very happy. She owns a trailer in the woods and has a stack of firewood, enough for the whole winter. Joan has 3 small children already, so by the time we have our own child, I will have had training in that field. We share a dream of having many more children. I love a big family - especially at Christmas. Just think of the fun you and Mom will have shopping for presents.

Joan has opened my eyes to the fact that marijuana doesn't really hurt anyone. We'll be growing it and trading it with the other people in the commune for all the cocaine and ecstasy we want. In the meantime, we'll pray that science will find a cure for AIDS so Joan can get better; she sure deserves it!

Don't worry Dad, I'm 15 years old now and I know how to take care of myself. Someday, I'm sure we'll be back to visit so you can get to know your grandchildren.

Your son, Chad

P.S. Dad, none of the above is true. I'm over at Tommy's house. I just wanted to remind you that there are worse things in life than the report card that's in my desk drawer.

I love you! Call when it is safe for me to come home

B.C. to join other provinces paying for vaccinating girls against HPV Sept. 20, 2007

Provided by: Canadian Press Written by: The Canadian Press, THE CANADIAN PRESS

VICTORIA - British Columbia will begin paying for girls to get vaccinated against a virus blamed for causing the majority of cervical cancer cases.

Health Minister George Abbott said Thursday the vaccine has shown considerable promise in preventing the disease and his government will join several other provinces in paying for it.

"It will be 100 per cent covered by the Province of British Columbia," Abbott said.

The cost will amount to about $30 million per year.

The move comes after Abbott was urged to do so last month by B.C. medical health officer Dr. Perry Kendall.

Kendall had recommended the province cover the cost of the vaccine for about 50,000 girls in Grade 6 starting next year and that the program would become routine.

Two strains of HPV cause genital warts and two strains of HPV cause about 70 per cent of cervical cancer cases.

The vaccine Gardasil, which prevents against those four strains, was approved by Health Canada last year for girls as young as nine.

"The cost of the HPV vaccine will be covered. it will be 100 per cent covered by the Province of British Columbia. We have some monies towards that coming from the federal government," Abbott said.

"There are still some discussions going on provincially and nationally among public health officials about what the best implementation strategy should be in respect of HPV. But it has shown sufficient promise at this point that we certainly will be proceeding with the program."

Why Fix What Ain't Broke...TO ALL THE KIDS WHO SURVIVED the 1930's, 40's, 50's, 60's and 70's!!

First, we survived being born to mothers who smoked and/or drank while they were pregnant.

They took aspirin, ate blue cheese dressing, tuna from a can, and didn't get tested for diabetes.

Then after that trauma, we were put to sleep on our tummies in baby cribs covered with bright colored lead-based paints.

We had no childproof lids on medicine bottles, doors or cabinets and when we rode our bikes, we had no helmets, not to mention, the risks we took hitchhiking.

As infants & children, we would ride in cars with no car seats, booster seats, seat belts or air bags.

Riding in the back of a pick up on a warm day was always a special treat.

We drank water from the garden hose and NOT from a bottle.

We shared one soft drink with four friends, from one bottle and NO ONE actually died from this.

We ate cupcakes, white bread and real butter and drank Kool-aid made with sugar, but we weren't overweight because,

WE WERE ALWAYS OUTSIDE PLAYING!

We would leave home in the morning and play all day, as long as we were back when the streetlights came on.

No one was able to reach us all day. And we were O.K.

We would spend hours building our go-carts out of scraps and then ride down the hill, only to find out we forgot the brakes. After running into the bushes a few times, we learned to solve the problem.

We did not have Playstations, Nintendo's, X-boxes, no video games at all, no 150 channels on cable, no video movies or DVD's, no surround-sound or CD's, no cell phones, no personal computers, no Internet or chat rooms.....

WE HAD FRIENDS and we went outside and found them!

We fell out of trees, got cut, broke bones and teeth and there were no lawsuits from these accidents.

We ate worms and mud pies made from dirt, and the worms did not live in us forever.

We were given BB guns for our 10th birthdays, made up games with sticks and tennis balls and, although we were told it would happen, we did not put out very many eyes.

We rode bikes or walked to a friend's house and knocked on the door or rang the bell, or just walked in and talked to them!

Little League had tryouts and not everyone made the team. Those who didn't had to learn to deal with disappointment. Imagine that!!

The idea of a parent bailing us out if we broke the law was unheard of. They actually sided with the law!

These generations have produced some of the best risk-takers, problem solvers and inventors ever!

The past 50 years have been an explosion of innovation and new ideas.

We had freedom, failure, success and responsibility, and we learned HOW TO DEAL WITH IT ALL!

If YOU are one of them. CONGRATULATIONS!

You might want to share this with others who have had the luck to grow up as kids, before the lawyers and the government regulated so much of our lives for our own good.

While you are at it, forward it to your kids so they will know how brave (and lucky) their parents were.

Kind of makes you want to run through the house with scissors, doesn't it?!
